

The Academy of Media, Music, and The Arts at Montgomery Blair High School

"I have advocated for 30 years that, in order to preserve our democracy and protect ourselves against demagogues, we should have courses in schools on how to watch TV, how to read newspapers, how to analyze a speech – how to understand the limitations of each medium and make a judgment as to the accuracy or the motives involved."

Walter Cronkite, retired news anchor for CBS television network

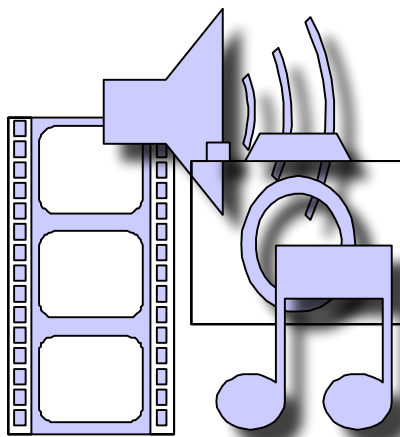

Media Literacy is a 21st century approach to education. It provides a framework to access, analyze, evaluate, and create messages in a variety of forms including print to performance and classic design to contemporary expression. Media Literacy builds an understanding of the role of media in society as well as essential skills of inquiry and self-discovery necessary for citizens of a democracy.
